(i) The other type of essay is written from quite the opposite viewpoint from a personal essay. In other words, you do not put your personal opinions, ideas, expressions, etc., into the essay. Instead, you keep yourself aloof and write from an impersonal or objective or points of view. Instead of describing your own feelings and ideas in first person, as you do in the personal essay, you write from the third person point of view and treat the subject in an unbiased, detached manner. Let us take examples. While writing an impersonal essay, for instance, on love, you discuss what love is, its various definitions, the place of love in human life, etc. You will write from an objective point of view. Such an essay would be called reflective or expository. But the same essay would become personal if you were to introduce episodes and incidents from your own life and describe some of your own experiences.

There was some tricky climbing between the South Summit and what is popularly known as Hillary's Step. Ang Dorjee and Lhatoo were already over it, but I was still negotiating its vertical face when Ang Dorjee gesticulated towards the top. I was thrilled. The goal was near. With renewed vigour I was on top of step in seconds. The sun had made the snow soft and climbing was easier here than it had been. A few steps later the slope plunged down deeply. Success was within reach. On 23rd May, 1984, I stood on top of everest, the first Indian woman to have done so.
